31. Motor Vehicles must be insured and copies of the VALID insurance must be given to the office.

32. ELECTRICITY – Avoid electrical fires:

1. RV's built for 30 amps plugged into 50 amps (reducers do not prevent the fires).
2. RV's built for 30 amps and 50 amps maximum "overloading" their systems with more and more appliances in addition to what the vehicle was built for.
3. RV breakers do not always "pop" when they should

Take a minute and see how many amps you could be using in your RV's 30 94 50 amp electrical systems. It is surprising how fast the amps add up which causes your breaker or the RV Park's breaker to "trip". Knowing the amps of all electrical use and prevent the inconvenience of "MY electricity went out!" This list is the typical appliance used and the average amps required to operate them:

Computer-----	7.5 amps
Air Conditioner (1) -----	15.2 amps
Refrigerator-----	5.7 amps
Electric Water Heater-----	12.5 amps
Microwave Oven-----	12.8 amps
Electric Coffee Pot-----	9.0 amps
Toaster-----	10.0 amps
Hair Dryer-----	10.0 amps
TV-----	2.0 amps
Hand Vacuum-----	2.0 amps
Electric Fry Pan-----	10.0 amps
Iron-----	10.0 amps
Food Processor-----	6.0 amps
Crock Pot-----	1.5 amps
Heating Pad-----	0.5 amps
1,100 Watt Heater-----	10.0 amps

Total     124.7 amps

In the morning if you start your air conditioner and the hot water heater is on, then you start your coffee pot, make some toast, watch some TV – you are pulling 50 amps when all appliances are operating at maximum. You also cook something in the microwave at the same time – LOOK OUT! Most RV's have a switch so you can run only the microwave or water heater at one time – HOWEVER, NOT ALL RV'S HAVE THIS FEATURE.

Most electrical products show how many watts or amps it takes to operate the appliances printed on the product itself or on the instructions. If it shows watts – divide the watts by 12 (volts) and that gives you the amps. To get the watts – multiply the amps by 120 (volts).

It's worth your time to take an inventory on the "amps" each of your electrical appliance uses, then you can average your total usage at one time and this greatly reduces the "My electricity went out!" anxiety.

33. SEWAGE SYSTEM – Due to damage by Hurricane Wilma, we had to replace our entire sewage system. We used the best materials and the most expensive commercial pumps.

Yet on a regular basis we have whole sections of our park and the public toilets with clogged pipes and pumps. Reasons are large amounts of plastics, female sanitation products, rags, towel shreds, rubbers, cardboard, rope, bandages, as well as thick paper towels. No sewage system can handle this amount and this type of garbage. They are built to remove sewage only.

Your comfort is of prime importance to us. We would greatly appreciate if you do not flush the garbage, but use plastic bags to dispose of it.

Violations of these rules and regulations and of federal, state, county and city laws: and legal ordinances, or generally antisocial behavior, drunkenness, profanity, loud talk, immoral conduct and disruptive noises will not be tolerated. Florida statute allows eviction for uncorrected violations after due warning by management. Campers who engage in violent behavior will be evicted without notice.

BEFORE YOU BLOW YOUR BREAKER!

When forwarding you cannot do this with the U.S. Postal Service you must change it individually with all of your creditors.

CAMPGROUND ETIQUETTE

1. FOLLOW THE RULES: Individual parks usually hand you a copy of their rules when you register. Adhering to these rules is one of the basics of campground etiquette. It makes things easier for everyone involved – you, your neighbors and the park operators. Typical guidelines include reduced speed limits on campground roads for the safety of all involved. You are typically expected to unhook a dinghy before driving to your site. There are usually defined quiet hours when you should keep the noise down, turn off outdoor lights, generators – basically, the party is over, please refer to #20.

2. ELIMINATE PET PEEVES: Literally, Pick up after your pets. Stop excessive or extended barking. Don't leave a howling dog unattended to bother the neighbors. Use a leash to keep your pet safe. Even if Spot is friendly, not everyone is an animal lover. Good pet etiquette on your part helps ensure that the many RVers with pets are welcome at campgrounds.

3. SEWER CONNECTIONS: Do them right. Make them secure. No torn hoses. In most places, your sewer connection faces you neighbor's "patio" area. This is another time where being discreet and careful is part of good campground etiquette.

4. WASHING THE RV: Most campgrounds will not allow washing to avoid wasting water, high water bills, muddy sites, etc. Read the rules. You usually have to get by with a small bucket and rag and/or waterless cleaner to just do minimal spot cleaning. If you are lucky enough to find a place where you can really wash the RV, use common sense; don't have the water flowing when you aren't actually using it. Watch the spray – your neighbor may not be interested in having their rig washed. In fact, it makes for friendly campground etiquette if you let your neighbor know ahead of time that you plan to wash your rig. That way, they can close any windows or put away articles that might inadvertently get wet.

5. NO TRESPASSING: When we first started out, a fellow RVer came over and asked if he could look around on "our property" for something he had lost – a paper that had blown out of his car the night before. We appreciated his asking first and were somewhat amused by the term "our property." But, in fact, one of the unspoken rules of campground etiquette is that you and your pet stay off occupied sites. For the time a camper is on a site, it is their space and their privacy should be respected. If you are taking a stroll around the campground, the operative word is "around." Stay on roads and pathways – don't cut through your neighbor's turf.

6. KEEPING UP THE NEIGHBORHOOD: In general, be tidy. RVing is an outdoor pastime and RVers are generally an easy going lot. However, there is a point where too much stuff laying around outside the RV starts to look sloppy. Trash or anything loose that can blow around is a definite no-no.

7. DO UNTO OTHERS: When in doubt, follow the golden rule. If you aren't sure of the proper campground etiquette for something, think about how you would like to be treated. If you are concerned that something might bother your neighbor, your best bet is just to ask them. If that doesn't work, consider moving to another site or another campground. After all – you are in an RV!

WE ARE HAPPY TO HAVE YOU HERE AS OUR GUEST. HAVE A GREAT TIME.
